The recommendations of the editors of Investor Business DailyHere is a game that many would like to play, how to make a billion dollars a month? And nine investors just pulled it off with GameStop shares. Short selling is a trading strategy based on speculation that the company's shares will fall in price. GameStop, a troubled video game retailer based in the mall, has been an attractive target for short sellers, but shares have rallied for retail investors on Reddit and its share prices have risen as short investors have been squeezed. After today's closing bell, GameStop's market value was $13.5 billion, or about the same as the New York Giants, Dallas Cowboys and New England. The three most valuable teams in the National Football League together. Short seller Andrew Loft, whose company was one of the hedge funds that sparked this week's battle with small traders over GameStop Corp., saying in a YouTube video Friday that his company will no longer post research on short selling. The latest twist in the saga sent shock waves through Wall Street as amateur investors pile into heavily short-circuited stocks such as GameStop and AMC Entertainment Holdings Inc. It's a big change of course for one of the world's best-known short sellers. Left, author of dozens of investigative reports on the S&P 500 over the past decade, is credited as helping pioneer anti-action betting tactics by publishing research that has encouraged others to follow his lead and profit when they do. For Chinese investors, including Justin Sun, FOMO has overcome fears of losing money. The Princeton economist looked at the effects of wage increases over five years at U.S. McDonald's fast food restaurants. (Bloomberg) -- How the GameStop Corp. saga continues to play out in the markets, the drama has now cost the exchange-traded fund almost 80% of its assets. Investors pulled roughly $700 million from the SPDR S&P Retail ETF (ticker XRT) this week, draining total assets to just $164 million. The outflow comes after a surge in GameStop increased its weight in XRT to 20%, given that the fund tracks an equally weighted index, the weight of the video game retailer should be closer to 1%. Theories about what motivated the outflow, given that they happened along with a nearly 20% rally in the XRT just this week. One possibility is that because XRT's paid-up shares come in kind - meaning its shares are exchanged for underlying funds in the fund - investors are getting rid of the ETFs to get their hands on the hard-to-lend GameStop shares. Others assume that with such heavy weighting on the highly volatile GameStop, some keepers may be determined to take a profit. Bloomberg Intelligence analysts support the first theory. GameStop's rising borrowing rates signal strong demand for equities, with hedge funds potentially trying to close or adjust positions. BI analysts James Seyffart and Eric Balchunas wrote in a report on Friday, "Redemption in kind was probably an attempt by investors to get into the hands of rare GameStop shares. The company has a relatively small float, with only 69.7 million shares in circulation. And with more than 100% of the total bear borrowed betting against it (shares can be borrowed more than once), this has created a stock hunt, according to BI. Street Streets Matt Bartolini, however, said there's probably a lot of motivation at work, not a desire for GameStop action. One reasoning is that hefty GameStop weighing has increased the overall volatility of XRT, seek other means of exposure to the retail sector. It's investors who aren't more risky, who aren't looking at speculation, who are likely to be playing down some trend that started the year, such as economic recovery. Bartolini, head of SPDR Americas Research, said in a phone interview. As a result of this price appreciation, this investment thesis has now been distorted. Others believe the outflow could simply be investors making profits after an incredible rise. XRT gained about 40% in January, the best month in history. Anyone who was a long XRT before it all started had a reason. Whatever the reason, it wasn't from mechanical pop in memo stocks that happened to be inside. Wharton School of Pennsylvania professor Jeremy Siegel sends a warning to Robinhood CEO Vlad Tenev told Yahoo Finance that he fully supports the class of individual investors behind a week of chaotic market activity. Bank of America sounded the alarm over the shares on Friday as it warned of an imminent correction. Rates, regulation, redistribution of 3R are historical catalysts that end bull markets and bubbles... we're talking about all '21 events, not '22, and they're all spelling down/volatile upcoming quarters/years. Michael Hartnett, the bank's chief investment strategist, said in a Flow Show note to clients. When it comes to regulation, Hartnett said investors should note that China's central bank will tighten liquidity this week. (Bloomberg) -- Bitcoin investors must be prepared to lose all their money, said European Central Bank Board member Gabriel Makhlouf, the central banker's latest warning about the cryptocurrency. Personally, I'm not sure why people invest in these types of assets, but they see them as assets clearly, Makhlouf, who is also governor of the Irish central bank, told Bloomberg TV on Friday. Our task is to ensure consumer protection. Makhlouf's comments reflect skepticism from ECB leaders. Cryptocurrency is a highly speculative asset, President Christine Lagarde said this month. Bitcoin prices have more than doubled since November, reaching $40,000 earlier this month. Large movements in its value are common, with four daily fluctuations of more than 5% in the last nine on Friday. Bitcoin rallied above $35,000, with brokers crediting the move to Elon. Elon, mention of the cryptocurrency in its bio page on Twitter. Bitcoin jumps above $35,000 as Musk puts it in his Twitter profile. Still, Makhlouf does not see the problems of financial stability currently arising from Bitcoin itself. I am more concerned that consumers will make the right choices, he said. Tepper School of Business professor and former SEC chief economist Chester Spatt explains how the goals haven't moved, but rather the plumbing and user agreements of the financial system have not been well understood. Married couples have a choice at tax time. They can file income tax returns jointly or separately. Most married people automatically file joint tax returns, but there are situations where filing separately can be better. The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) issued an official statement about last week's slump in the public stock market. It is a relatively brief statement and does not mention any of the key players by name (aka GameStop, Reddit, Robinhood and others), but acknowledges that extreme stock price volatility has the potential to expose investors to rapid and serious losses that could undermine market confidence, and basically says that the commission is closely watching to ensure that this is not the case. The SEC statement said it believes core market infrastructure remains intact despite heavy trading volumes over the past week, primarily driven by activity organized by retail investors acting in agreement through the rWallStreetBets organization, a subreddit devoted to daily trading. The oil industry is finally recovering after a brutal year, and the two companies in particular look set to benefit along with The Young Ones, financially savvy and angry about being shut down from trading GameStop shares. One day after trading app Robinhood stopped buying hot stocks such as GameStop and AMC, the app turned off a key cryptocurrency buying feature. After a turbulent week for the stock market and a halt to trading in certain securities including GameStop (GME) and AMC, consumer investment app Robinhood has raised new capital. The new funds totaled more than $1 billion, with the company announcing to TechCrunch that they had been acquired from existing investor base. The New York Times reports that the company raised new equity after tapping its $500 million to $600 million credit lines. The company did not respond to TechCrunch's question regarding its credit lines. Investor's Business Daily's future is being sold on news of the J&J coronavirus vaccine, but shares of GME and AMC have soared. Novavax is highly effective.
